

BOSTON TEA PARTY IS IMITATED BY ALASKAN PEOPLE

Headed by Leading Citizens,
Incensed Throng Throws
Coal Into Bay at Cordova.

HAD APPEALED TO TAFT.

Angry with President Because the American Coal Fields
Have Not Been Opened.

CORDOVA, Alaska, May 5.—The excitement caused by the Government's failure to hurry action in Alaska coal land cases reached a climax yesterday when 300 business men and citizens formed a mob and, armed with shovels, marched to the ocean dock of the Alaska Steamship Company, where they proceeded to throw several hundred tons of British Columbia coal into the bay.

Incensed at the thought of no reply to appeals cabled to President Taft to urge early action looking to the opening of the Alaska coal fields, the citizens of Cordova decided to follow the example set by the "Boston Tea Party" and thus express the serious crisis that has been reached in the Alaska coal situation.

For several days the sentiment in favor of some public outburst has been quietly growing. When yesterday's cable dispatches from Washington failed to bring news of President Taft having acknowledged the receipt of the appeals from Alaska feeling increased, and the call to arms, which in this instance means a call to shovels, was sounded. Among those who participated in the "coal party" were A. J. Adams, President of the Chamber of Commerce; ex-Mayor W. H. Chase, and Councilmen James Flynn and Charles Ross.

Richard J. Barry, general agent of the Alaska Steamship Company and the Copper River Railroad, was in his office on the dock and was taken by surprise when the mob swooped down on the property. He demanded that the shoveling cease, but the crowd's only answer was "Give us Alaska coal." Barry was armed, but friends persuaded him not to fire. Workmen of the railroad shops were sent for and arrived with Superintendent Vanderveer at the same time that Chief of Police Dooley put in an appearance. Dooley ordered the mob to disperse, but President Adams of the Chamber of Commerce shouted: "Shovel away, boys. We want only Alaska coal."

Demand was then made in the name of the United States to disband or suffer arrest for rioting. This demand was heeded, merchants returning to their places of business. And other citizens going about their regular occupations.

If the local situation remains unchanged it is thought that Gov. Clark will ask that troops be sent from Fort Liscomb. The United States cruiser Buffalo will soon come here to repair the Government wireless station, and an effort will be made to have her land a guard.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

If you rescued a beautiful girl from danger, and—
If you were invited to spend that night at her father's house, and—
If in the dead of night you should hear strange sounds and get up to find your door locked on the outside, and—
If the door should suddenly be unlocked and you should be ordered to leave the house AT ONCE, without waiting for daylight, and—
If no one would explain such strange treatment to a guest and a rescuer of Beauty in Distress, and—
If you had already fallen in love with the girl, and were stirred up over the mystery that surrounded her—
What would you do?

It's ten to one you would not do anything that would throw you into such a tangle of strange adventures as did the hero of "THE PROFESSOR'S MYSTERY". This is the biggest mystery story of the decade. It will begin in Wednesday's EVENING WORLD, May 10.

What would you do?

WHEN IN DOUBT, KILL DOG.

At Least That's the Policeman Finlay's Method of "Keeping" a Mutt.

When it comes to devising ways and means for the safekeeping of a dog which is thought to need observation, Policeman Finlay of the Central Park station has an infallible scheme. He was standing at Fifth avenue and One Hundred and Tenth street to-day when a yellow mutt came along.

Said mutt was frothing at the mouth and yelping. Sundry persons thought it advisable to keep the dog for Board of Health investigation regarding its mental state. Finlay killed the dog and sent the body to the Board of Health "for safe keeping."
